

I enjoy the challenge of diagnosing and treating acute conditions, but also love educating and motivating patients to live a healthy lifestyle.

I find great gratification when my patients make positive strides toward their health goals that we have set. I like being the “cheerleader” if needed, as well as being the person that holds each individual accountable for the things they can control.

The relationships that I establish with my patients is based on trust and respect. My work is meaningful when I see that the work of the team, my patient and I, make a positive impact on the patient’s quality of life.
