About Me

I believe the best healthcare begins with listening, open communication and a partnership built on trust. Every patient has unique priorities, life experiences, and goals, and I strive to create an environment where patients feel comfortable, respected, and truly heard. Growing up in Beirut, Lebanon, before immigrating to the United States gave me a deep appreciation for the different challenges people face and reinforced the importance of meeting every patient with empathy, understanding, and without judgment.

I chose Family Medicine because I value the opportunity to care for patients through every stage of life and build lasting relationships over time. I joined Primary Care Associates because I believe the people you work alongside make all the difference. The compassionate, knowledgeable team and the practice's commitment to patient-centered care allow me to spend the time my patients need, build meaningful relationships, and provide the thoughtful, high-quality care they deserve.

Personal

Outside of work, I enjoy spending time with my husband and son, especially outdoors. Whether we're boating, fishing, working in the garden, trying new recipes, or caring for our flock of chickens, I appreciate the balance these activities bring. A perfect day ends with a warm cup of tea, my little one peacefully asleep, and a good movie to unwind with.
