About Me

I work in tandem with my patients to help them achieve their health goals, recognizing that good health is often supported by a broader team that includes family and loved ones. I enjoy getting to know the important people in my patients' lives and caring for patients within the context of their families and support systems. I strive to create a welcoming, lighthearted atmosphere when appropriate, but I'm also direct and compassionate when conversations are complex or difficult. I believe being truly listened to is essential to good care, and I don't take the trust patients place in me lightly.

I chose Family Medicine because of its broad scope and the opportunity to care for entire families—from newborns to great-grandparents—over many years. I joined Primary Care Associates of Appleton because of its collaborative culture and shared commitment to providing excellent care to the Fox Valley. As someone who grew up in Appleton, it's meaningful to serve the community I call home.
